GIR5203 Comparative Political Analysis

Course Code	GIR5203	Semester	2
Course Title	Comparative Political Analysis
Credits	4	Type	Core

Course Description

The paper aims at a comparative analysis of the political systems in the developing countries and the advanced industrialized countries by focusing on concepts, theories and the historical experiences. The attempt would be to steer clear of the Eurocentric bias in the field of Comparative Politics, and to identify the processes of de-centering which have reconfigured the field in significant ways whereby the Third World could be brought into focus.

Programme: MA (International Relations and Political Science)

Course Outcomes

The paper is expected to enable students to analyse the political systems in the developing and the developed world in a comparative framework, by providing them an array of scholarly literature on the area.

1. Comparative Politics: Nature and scope; evolution of Comparative Politics as a discipline
2. Select Approaches to the study of comparative politics :
  - i) Constitutionalism
  - ii) Political Economy Approach (including the Marxist Approach)
  - iii) Culture-centric Approach
  - iv) New Institutionalism
3. Institutions in Comparative Framework
  - i) Forms of Government: Federal & Unitary, Parliamentary & Presidential
  - ii) Separation of Powers in Comparative Perspective: India, USA, UK, Switzerland; Judicial Review
  - iii) Party Systems and the Role of Opposition; Pressure Groups; Electoral Systems
4. Political Economy of Development & Underdevelopment
  - i) Modernisation Theory by W W Rostow, Political Development and Political Modernization
  - ii) Dependency : Development and Underdevelopment.
  - iii) World System Theory
5. Political Culture, Political Socialization and Political Communication
6. Political Movements & Social Change:
  - i) Revolution: Theories and Types
  - ii) Circulation of Elites: Political Elite; Elitist theory of Democracy
7. Democracy: Patterns

Course Code	GIR5008	Semester
Course Title	Africa in World Affairs
Credits	4	Type	Optional

Course Description

This course examines the international politics of mainly sub-Saharan Africa since independence. It looks at the emergence of African states as independent actors and the degree of cooperation and conflict among them. It will also look at the location of the continent in the international economic order. After a briefing on the Cold War and its implications, the paper will look at the nature of conflict within Africa and the circumstances in which outside intervention took place. It will also look at how African states have evolved regional organisations to meet the new international environment. The learner will gain knowledge about the geography and international politics of Africa and identify the limitations of studying the region by using conventional IR theory and tools .

Course Outcomes

On completion of this course, the learners will possess a broad understanding of the roles that enslavement, colonialism and the Cold War played in the development of modern governance structures, politics and socio-economic development policies in Africa. They will be able to critically explain the theoretical and conceptual underpinnings of African International Relations and identify Africa- related
